

Transitioning to The Third Act

A new phenomenon of our times.

First Act

Forming your personality

Second Act

Developing your character

Third Act

Integrating personality, character & experience

The Third Act is a new developmental stage in human evolution.

In just three generations we have gained thirty years in life expectancy and we are currently adding two and half years per decade.

Never before have so many people lived for so long.

Two-thirds of those who have ever lived over the age of sixty-five are alive today.

So what does this mean for you?

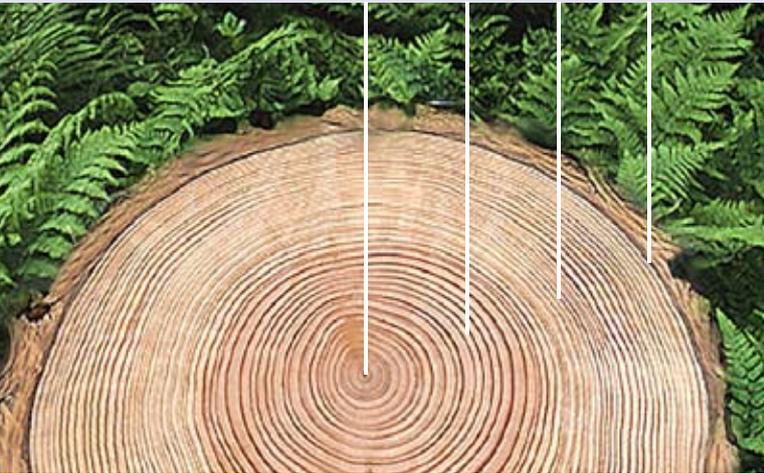

Next Workshop:
13th to 15th June

The Third Act Programme

The Third Act programme addresses this phenomenon from three different perspectives:

- What does it look like objectively?
- How do we deal with it socially & culturally?
- What does it mean for me personally?

A Developmental Autobiography

Participants are taken through their own Developmental Autobiography.

- How did your nature and nurture form your personality in the first-act in life?
- How did your character develop in the second-act?
- What opportunities await you in the third-act?

What others have said of the programme:

"This really worked. We self-selected for a topic that was relevant to us. Trust was established early on as personal agendas were put aside. The setting facilitated the inquiry and sufficient time was allowed for us to determine what was important to us." (Director of a European software company)

"If you could export this, you could change the world." (A CEO of a US multinational)

"I thought the structure and content was excellent." (A retired partner from one of the big four accounting firms)

"I think you are on to something here. This programme's time has come." (A director of a financial services company)

"I thought you managed things in a way that let the process emerge and which gave time for everyone involved to contribute in their own unique ways, and at their own pace." (A consultant in the field of leadership development)

"On the journey through the second-act I was reminded of the plain of desolation I had felt about whether my life had any real meaning. Was that all there is, I wondered? As we progressed through the third act I saw the opportunity I was been given to live a deeply fulfilling third-act." (A financial consultant)

Facilitator : Dr. Edward J Kelly

Edward brings his experience as a researcher in the field of adult development to this exploration of the third act. To this he adds his skill as a facilitator. In the past few years he has led over forty workshops in Intel, Accenture, Google and others. He is also a regular presenter at the MBA and Innovation programmes at University College Dublin (UCD) and has published articles on adult development in the ILR and JIIP. He can be contacted at ekelly11@gmail.com and on +353 86 810 2000.