

SPIRITUAL LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT WORKSHOP

JUNE 5-7, 2015

This Spiritual Leadership Development Workshop is a 3-day retreat for anyone interested in furthering their personal development and exploring the intersection of spiritual and adult development. This workshop is designed for those leaders and organizations that desire to integrate the highest conceivable organizational levels, divine forms of governance and “ultimate” sources of authority. This will be of particular interest to practitioners or researchers seeking to improve leadership effectiveness and unleash creativity at every level of their organizations, individual and system-wide, while attending to the spiritual dimensions within them. Workshop participants may attend to their cognitive development using Torbert’s Action Logics and spiritual development using Fowler’s Faith Stages within an integrated, contemplative retreat setting. We believe that such an opening to higher forms of governance, for the sake of the current set of crises we face as a world, holds momentous potential for the sustainability of all forms of organization.

Alumni of developmental workshops of all traditions will find this retreat to be a uniquely contemplative container in which to more openly traverse one’s own and others’ kaleidoscope of developmental landscapes. If you have previously completed the GLP or MAP and received commentary and debrief, please inform the facilitators and bring those materials to the workshop ready to engage them from an explicitly spiritual perspective. We embrace a diversity of faith structure as well as spiritual content among participants, thus maintaining the value of multiplicity within the content of spiritual and religious conversation. Nonetheless, the facilitators still maintain an interest in expressing what is common within this spiritual diversity, grounded in a conversation about developmental theory, as a human universal process of making meaning about ultimate questions, acknowledging a logic of conviction that operates alongside a logic of rationality.

This Spiritual Leadership Development Workshop is an experiential, here-and-now, contemplative program designed to:

Assess your current leadership developmental stage (Torbert’s action-logics), the structures of thought that guide your action and influence your results.

Consider your spiritual developmental stage (Fowler’s faith stages), the structures of belief that guide your internal convictions and influence your way of being.

Become conscious of alignment or divergence between your action logic and your faith stage.

Allow space and time for you to rest in the affirmation of what you already know to be true about you and your leadership, the embodiment of the ultimate source of love and life.

Create conditions for you to discover or recommit to your own discernment of calling and vocation where you are, opening to further discernment about where you are being guided.

Explore spiritual practices that support increased alignment between them, resulting in a more mindful, integrated, and authentic template from which to act and reflect in your leadership role.

Engage the fullness of your developmental capacity, compassionately and gently fathom the edges that limit your effectiveness and build bridges to those capacities not yet imagined or called forth.

Discern the seat of your deepest power and authority, your connection to divine intelligence for the sake of your being, your leadership, your organization, and your world.

Enlarge the vision of your impact in leading yourself and others toward deeper spiritual joy in the meaningful work you undertake together.

FACILITATION TEAM

Cara Miller, PhD has experience teaching, working, consulting, and mentoring in the fields of leadership, organizational development, adult development, spiritual formation, and vocational ministry. Cara received a Masters of Divinity at Princeton Theological Seminary and a PhD in Leadership Studies at the University of San Diego. She is an Action Inquiry Associate, and was most recently a teaching fellow for Robert Kegan’s course in adult development through Harvard Extension School. These commitments reflect Cara’s desire to practice an embodied form of leadership that strives for alignment between her own spiritual and cognitive development in every context she enters. Her ultimate desire is to reflect the deep, glorious love from and for which she was created.

Nancy Wallis, PhD, works as both academic and practitioner in the field of organizational leadership development. Currently Faculty in Organizational Studies at Pitzer College, Nancy also serves as Faculty in the MBA programs at Pepperdine and Danube universities. She is a founding member of the Action Inquiry Fellowship and works with organizational leaders committed to enhancing leadership capacity within individuals, executive teams and throughout organizational cultures. With 30 years’ experience as senior leader, management consultant, executive coach, administrator, professor and mentor, Nancy specializes in leadership development that enlivens mindsets and reframes challenges as transformational opportunities.
